inIVA and Proboscis present

A 'carnival' performance and public forum that uses participatory sensing & media scavenging to make a stand about climate change.

With increasing concerns about climate change, individuals and communities are looking for new ways to take action and make a real and lasting impact.

Follow the Snout 'carnival' performance from Cargo and attend the public forum in the afternoon where, artists, producers, performers and computer programmers demonstrate how to create wearable technologies from scavenged media, in order to map the invisible gases that affect our everyday environment.

The project by inIVA, Proboscis and researchers from Birkbeck College also explores how communities can use this visual evidence to participate in or initiate local action.

Tuesday 10 April 2007 10.00am Performance 1.30-5.00pm Conference

Cargo, 83 Rivington Street Kingsland Viaduct London, EC2A 3AY

Admission is free, but booking essential Info +44 (0)20 7729 9616 www.iniva.org institute@iniva.org

Access is Limited, please call in advance for details

Supported by Arts Council England & Esmée Fairbairn

